

This project represents the organization and preservation of old photographs in the holdings of the Scotch Plains Public Library.

The original photos were photocopied and placed in acid-free folders. The photocopies exhibit much of the detail of the originals. In some cases due to fading, the photocopy is even more precise.

Other photographs were borrowed from the collections of local residents and photocopied. Notations of these are made on each page. A listing of these contributors can be found at the end of volume two.

Identifications were made based upon notations written on the backs of the originals.

The use of the photocopied photographs enables the Library to share its collection while preserving the originals.
