

MILLE GRAZIE

Many thanks to everyone who helped put this history together.

My mother inspired me twenty-five years ago by telling me stories of her family. She had a fantastic memory for dates and names so I had a good base to work from. She left me with a wealth of documents and photographs that are the heart of the book.

I think it only appropriate to list family and friends who were generous with their time to help me.

Frances Iaione Bradley for her wonderful recollections of the house on Mountain Avenue and the detailed accounts of the people who were a part of our lives; Gina Iaione Czerwinski for our mother's recipes, her memories and many "Brownie" photographs from the '40s; my daughter Terese Ann Kelly's experiences and pictures from her visit to Montazzoli; the many pictures contributed by Kathleen DiFrancesco Wilhelm from her mother's collection and her early memories; Suzanne DiFrancesco Tamborini's collection of her mother's recipes; documents and photographs contributed by my brother Tony Iaione and his wife Phyllis Parillo Iaione; photographs from my brother Jake Iaione and his wife Jean Powers Iaione's many albums; important documents shared by my nephew, Joe Iaione Jr.,--my father's citizenship papers and his discharge papers from the Italian army.

Amerina Importico and Flavia Quinzio Novello for background material on the Marcovecchio/Quinzio family; Lorenzo Novello who shortly before his death gave me a detailed genealogy of the Marcovecchios; Joe Marcovecchio and his stories and photographs of our Marcovecchio grandparents; colleagues who helped to translate the Italian documents--Katja deRuter and Lugia Cagan, both language instructors.

Then, of course, there is the Internet. The wealth of information from the Ellis Island website enabled me to retrieve almost all of the early data for my parents and uncles. The extensive and lengthy history of the battles on the Isonzo Front (Austrian-Hungarian border) that my father describes in his war experiences--from 1915 to 1917--broadened my knowledge of Italy's role in World War I is included in this narrative.

Florence Iaione Kelly