

The old swimming hole, looking east. This winding creek provided recreation as well as vital resources to local farms.

Beneath a dam (1907). This dam was located on the Simeon Lambert farm on Raritan Road in Scotch Plains. Lambert used the dammed water to help run his cider mill and distillery. Of course, others dammed and diverted the natural creeks in the area for grist mills, etc.