

“Vail of desolation” from Gems of Plainfield and Vicinity (published by G. Thorn, Plainfield, N.J.). Double photographs for use in stereoscopes were popular during Victorian times. The view in this stereo-image is of Feltville, which was part of Scotch Plains in the Watchung Mountains.

“Devil’s chimney,” from Stereo Gems of New Jersey (published by G. Thorn, Plainfield, N.J.). Viewing this stereo-image through a stereoscope would make the ravine three-dimensional.
