

THE SISTER STATION. The Fanwood station was one of seven stations built by the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the late 1880s. This sister station was located on Clinton Avenue in Plainfield and was later demolished.

THE OLDEST STATION. Built in 1874, this structure functioned as a railroad station until 1965, when it became a community center for the borough. It is the oldest remaining railroad station in Union County. An excellent example of Victorian Gothic architecture, it is designated on the local and state historic registries and the National Register of Historic Places.
