

THE RAILWAY SETTING. A camelback engine at the head of a passenger train pauses in the westbound lane at the Fanwood station. Three railroad sidings can be seen in this 1940s photograph. The siding at the far right served the white freight station. The left two sidings, each hosting a freight car, ran across South Avenue to bring bulk materials into the coal and lumber yards.