

THOMAS YOUNG. This gentleman was a town father in the truest sense. He served as the first mayor of Fanwood for four years and was always interested in civic affairs. He was the father of Horace Young, one of the town's postmasters. Thomas died in 1917 at the age of 86, having been honored by the Central Railroad as the oldest commuter to New York on its line.