

THE MIGHTY OAK. This 1890s photograph of the venerable 300-year-old Fanwood Oak Tree captures a view of All Saints Episcopal Church to the left. The tree to the left of the Fanwood Oak is a sycamore that still stands proudly on Martine Avenue today. The Fanwood Oak succumbed to old age and had to be removed in 1998.

A 1902 MAP. This street map of the geographic center of Fanwood shows the four tracks of the Central Railroad. Mapmakers of this period showed boundary lines, the names of owners, and the shapes of structures, including barns and pathways, on the properties.
