

A LEGEND. Heavy snows in the 1930s added grandeur to the Fanwood Oak. More than 100 years ago and on sunnier days, a journalist named Fanny Wood may have sat beneath this tree to write about the beauty of the area. Some of these features were used in railway advertisements to attract people to the country. John Taylor Johnson, president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, may have named the borough after this legendary lady.