SCOTCH PLAINS HIGH SCHOOL

Scotch Plains is assured of a future generation of alert, well-informed citizens through its highly-rated public school system.

Fanwood Borough and Scotch Plains Township realized a better and more efficient education would be provided for all children if the two communities pooled their resources. Hence, the school system is a consolidated one.

The combined school district is directed by a Board of Education composed of nine members, six from Scotch Plains and three from Fanwood. This representation is based on the ratables of the two communities. Three members are elected for three years on the second Tuesday in February.

The Board, which meets the third Thursday of every month except in July and August, determines its own financial budget and submits it to the electorate for approval.

A superintendent, appointed by the Board, is in direct charge of the five elementary schools and the combined Junior and Senior High School, with their 100 teachers. Enrollment for the year 1953-54 was over 2,700.

A secretary-business manager is in charge of purchases and other non-academic affairs of the schools.
