

As Juniors Too, We

"STARDUST"

On December third and fourth, 1948, we staged our well-remembered junior play, "Stardust." We were pleased as punch with our very own production and especially proud that it was put on to a full house both nights. It seemed a masterpiece at the time, but as we look back at it now we realize that Bill WAS a little wobbly on that ladder and that, well maybe Jennie and Garland's kiss wasn't too professional and that just perhaps Dot and Bruce did laugh a little when she slapped him (at least she did . . . Werts' and Ethel's prompting, Mr. Limoli's directing, and the outstanding work done by all the committees combined to make "Stardust" a superb junior play and one we can never forget.
