When the grass starts turning green and the ground hardens after winter, you will usually find the track team running and jumping out near the field house. The fellows work hard to get in shape and usually do all right for themselves when the actual competition starts. Good sportsmanship as well as physical endurance are stressed in all track competition.

The Scotch Plains long distance runners have had the best year ever as their record shows. After a rather slow start, the team brought home wins from the last two meets. Practice is done outside (usually in cold weather) for the grueling two and one-half mile races. The boys deserve much credit for their hard work.
