

FIRST ROW, left to right: Faith Limpert, James Burke, Ella Callam, Edward Braynock. SECOND ROW: George Kurek, Edward Warshow, Richard Herrick, James Gustave, Paul Ratner.

"Did you say Shakespeare?"

"I came, I saw, I conquered."

ENGLISH

RICHARD J. HERRICK

If you were to walk unexpectedly into an English room at any time of the day, it would not be unusual to interrupt a production of a Shakespearean drama, a lively discussion on the works of Poe, an extemporaneous speech on the pyromaniac, or a friendly argument about whether a certain phrase is adjectival or adverbial. Learning to read for enjoyment and knowledge, to write clearly and effectively, to speak easily with organized thoughts, and to listen with understanding are all part of the four year program that makes English one of the most important courses in our school. We owe a great debt to our fine English Department for the excellent preparation which we receive for the years ahead.

two adjectival phrases followed by an expletive . . .

