ART

ELINOR YOUNG

The Art Department attempts to develop a creative ability in its students by increasing their knowledge of the basic ideas of shading, balance, proportion, and color. With the aid of its excellent facilities, many students find art profitable and enjoyable as a pastime. Those planning a career in artistry may take Applied Art as a major. The showcase in the main hall is a fine example of the Art Department's work.

READING

WILLIAM SMITH

Even though no grades or credit are given, Reading is a valuable course for improvement in speed, comprehension, and the correction of poor reading habits. With the aid of various machines, written exercises, and timed readings, the student can chart his own progress. The classes are small and provide a good opportunity for individual help. This course is a worthwhile and popular one because of the valuable help given in reading.
