JUNIOR PLAY

The Junior Play is certainly one of the most enjoyable events of the year, and our production of "Gidget" was no exception.

"Gidget's" eager cast could be found in the auditorium every afternoon waiting for the clock to strike four so rehearsals could get underway.

After what seemed an unusually short period of time, the play was only three weeks off, lines were still unlearned, and only two weeks of afternoons left to practice remained. Thus, there were those early rehearsals during Christmas vacation, which turned into a picnic of soda and donuts served in the orchestra pit.

The evening of January 13th finally arrived, bringing with it the realization that the class of '63's first dramatic attempt was to be a hit, not soon to be forgotten.

"Smash Hit"—New York Times, "Excellent performance"—Tribune, "Four Stars"—Daily News.

Although these reviews were not written about our senior play, they very well could have been. The Class of '63, to the delight of all those who attended, displayed all their acting talents once again by giving "The Peace Corps Girls." All the long hours and tears behind this success certainly seemed worthwhile to the cast when, under the direction of Mrs. Limpert, they heard the applause of the audience as the curtain fell.
