

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

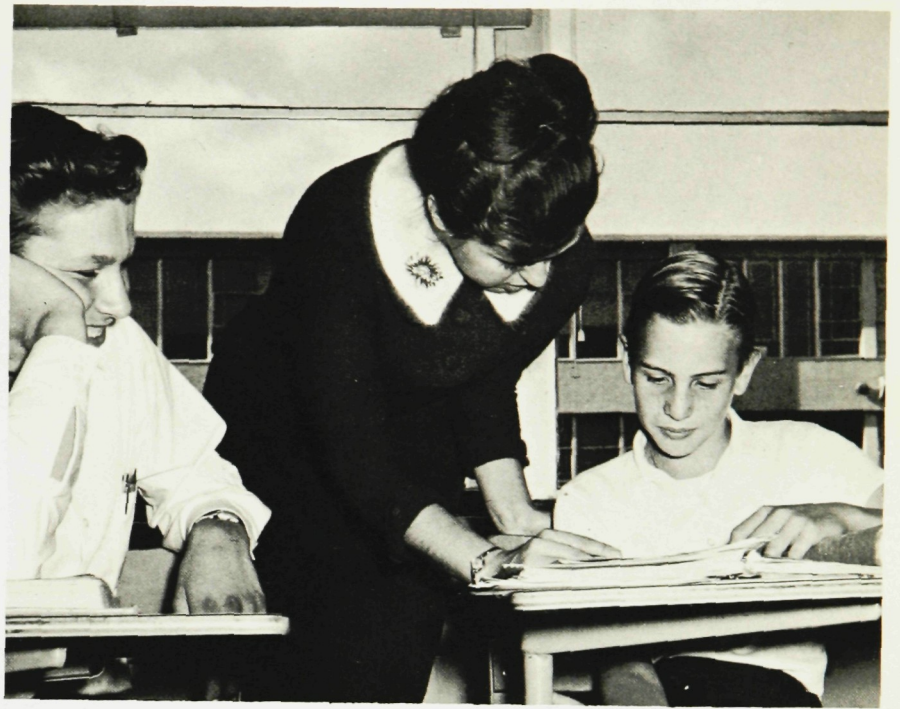

Mr. Edward Braynock

From Chaucer to Hemingway and from writing essays to term papers, our English classes cover a wide range of topics designed to increase our knowledge and improve self-expression in our own language.

The largest department in our school, the English Department influences every single student, since English is a required course.

Through the reading of literature, through writing, and through class discussions, we obtain a background upon which we can base future study.

Because of the efforts of this department, we have the necessary foundation in reading, writing, speaking, and listening, on which our futures depend.

"But in this case with the gerund coming after the past participle, the adverbial clause . . ."

"... I am in blood stepped so far ..."

"My topic is: 'The Importance of Eggs.'"

"... uh, sir ..."
