

Every September there is an unavoidable excitement at school. Students are anxious to see their "not seen since June" friends, to see how much they'll be able to get away with in study hall, and to see what courses they like and dislike. September 1967 at Scotch Plains-Fanwood High School experienced new excitement. "What do you mean no Senior privileges?" . . . "I'm taking an experimental math course" . . . "It's at home—no, not at Park Junior High" . . . Conversation and thought were centered on the new aspects of life at the school.
