Organization and preparation were the key words to describe the functioning of the Administration at SPFHS this year, as it did a remarkable job in operating the school in a smooth, orderly fashion despite numerous problems, programs, and changes.

Most challenging of all was the maintenance of split sessions for the Sophomore Class until the student body was able to use the facilities in the new addition. With the cooperation of the students, the end of the split-sessions and the move into the new building was effected in January without any major difficulties. The school also underwent both the Middle States Evaluation and the New Jersey State Evaluation this year, but organization and careful planning by the Administration led to a successful preparation of the school for evaluation by the Accrediting Commissions.

Looking towards the future, planning for next year's modular scheduling and independent study programs occupied much of the time of the Administration. These ideas reflected a growing faith in the maturity and the responsibility of the student body, and for this, the student body deeply appreciated the Administration for its part in making this year memorable and successful.
