

English Department

. . . English department . . . stressing originality and imagination in teaching and learning . . . using audio-visual equipment in original presentations by students . . . stimulating self-expression through classes in poetry and short story . . . English independent study area; allowing students to develop English-related skills at their leisure . . . student constructed media kits; learning by creating, at the same time providing others with a valuable educational tool . . . field trips; "Much Ado About Nothing", "Our Town", "Othello" . . . experiencing the excitement of Broadway shows . . . gaining appreciation for the theater through actual acting and directing . . . preparing for college; developing essential composition and expository skills in advanced comp . . . expanding the study of black literature . . . discovering the framework of human experience through literature . . . striving to understand mankind. . .

