

"Black Kaleidoscope" presented various aspects of Black art.

Black Student Union

. . . blacks and whites fostering an understanding of black thought and culture . . . becoming a vital voice in the school . . . speaking through talent in "Black Kaleidoscope"; performing skits on inner city life and black involvement in Viet Nam . . . rehearsing for the play "Day of Absence" in March . . . looking ahead . . . becoming more aware of the world beyond SPF . . . attending the Attucks-King parade and Youth Leadership Conference . . . preparing a rock show for the Sickle Cell Anemia Fund . . . searching to recognize and acknowledge the similarities, not differences, in all men. . . .

Alethia Fowler asks for runway clearance.

"You, in the third row, see me after this show." Patrick Page.

Linda Reeves and Claire Lomack portray a black/white world.