

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT

Marilyn Roll, Mary Hamulak.

Drawing interest from the entire student body and offering a greater diversity among courses are the goals achieved by the Home Economics Department. Among the new courses offered are Stretch-n-Sew, developed primarily for boys, and Foreign Foods, which not only teaches students to create foreign dishes but also exposes them to the cultures of many nations. Another popular new program, Living With Children, allows students to independently run a playschool environment while observing child behavior. The department also collaborates with the Business Department in creating a class on Consumer Economics which teaches students to shop intelligently and cautiously. The continuously changing curriculum and the large number of students enrolled in courses illustrates the Home Economics Department's concern for meeting the interests of all students.
