

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

Striving to offer a varied and valuable curriculum, members of the English Department met to evaluate and revise the Restrictive English Elective Program which was offered for the first time this year. In addition, the department worked on expanding its level three program to accommodate those changes necessitated by the dropping of the American Studies program. Students who wished to improve their basic communication skills and to choose prospective careers wisely, were able to enroll in the PEP and ICAN programs. The English Department fulfilled the needs of students who wanted college level programs by offering Advanced Placement courses in English composition and literature.
