During the past several years the Foreign Language Department has been facing the problem of cutting back. The faculty has lost a third of its members, and enrollment of students has decreased. Classes such as Conversational French have been cut while the remaining classes are becoming more generalized. Often level two and level three students are combined in one class. Despite these setbacks, the Foreign Language Department is optimistic about the future. The main emphasis is on showing the student how foreign language can be a part of his/her life, as more colleges and careers require foreign language.
