

The original "Raiders" who settled in the area now known as Scotch Plains-Fanwood were Indians.

In their daily activities, hunting, trading, and farming, they displayed qualities of unity, bravery, and strength. Occasionally the Raider went "on the warpath" to defend what was his.

In the early days of World War II, the high school adopted the Indian Raider as its official symbol. The Raider's characteristics are those which the school strives to follow. For over five decades this symbol has represented the school and its students.

Today we carry on this legacy . . .