

Relationships

Relationships are based on three basic elements: caring, sharing, and trust. Once you form a bond with someone, and combine all of these elements, it is then that you can say you have formed a new relationship. To reach this end, you must take the risk of inviting a friendship . . .

Student/Staff

. . . Faculty members are more than educators; they are friends — they really care about you! . . .