

Despite Tragic Mystery

Despite the disruption created by the increased media presence, including cable television, at SPFH, the Underclassmen did their best to "cope" with the mysterious disappearance of the Seniors. Some tried to drown their sorrows in music. Others sought the solace of friends. "Self-Defense" courses [see Photo below] became popular with some, while others, pre-occupied with thoughts of their missing friends [see Photo below to left], struggled in class. The Cafeteria Staff worried that decreased attendance at lunch periods in June could result in hundreds of pounds of leftover canned peaches. Even so, the Band played on, as another band had played, on the tilting deck of The Titanic.

