

FBLA Chapter Assumes High Profile In State, Regional Leadership

Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) is a student organization devoted to teaching its adolescent members what to expect and how to survive and grow in today's business world. This is accomplished annually through a potpourri of competitions, workshops, and conferences. Our SPFHs chapter assumed a high leadership profile among fellow State and Regional chapters in 1991. Led by Chapter President Allison Butz, who also served as a State FBLA officer this year, FBLA hosted an Executive Board conference of chapter officers from throughout New Jersey in late September.

The topic of that conference was the annual Regional conference of Atlantic Coast State chapters held at Baltimore's restored Inner Harbor in November. In January, an FBLA contingent attended the annual North Central Regional Conference. Sue McFall was named North Central Vice-President and was one of six SPFHs students — Beth Weber, Joe DeLeon, Laura Douglas, Doreen Summa, and Alana Cohen were the others — who placed significantly high in competitive events.

In between its travels and travails, FBLA again sponsored its Bowl-A-Thon at Clark Lanes in December to raise money for the March of Dimes, which combats crippling illnesses such as polio. Nearly 50 students participated, raising well over $1,000.00 for the March of Dimes.

Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA). Top Row (L-R): Martin Knudsen, Jim Malfetti, Dave Hill, Carolyn Depko, Matt Mahoney, Sharon Hennessey, Jill Eklof. 4th Row (L-R): Kerri Garrison, Monique Coleman, Maria Agnone, Erica Mobley, Christine Welsh, Tim Hawkins, Mark Szpakowski. 3rd Row (L-R): Kim Heine, Angela Caruso, Lauren Katz, Joe DeLeon, Lauren Flynn, Brandi Rappaport. 2nd Row (L-R): Kathy Flynn, Sue McFall, Nicole Biondi, Alana Cohen, Doreen Summa, Allison Butz, Matt Kelleher. Bottom Row (L-R): An Ho, Mark Kirshenbaum.

A totally spontaneous demonstration from the mysterious "Cult of DeSalvo."

