

The 1991 Varsity Volleyball team lost only three Seniors to graduation in 1990; unfortunately, two of them were Tina Massimo and Amy Rogers. Otherwise, the '91 team has been virtually intact for much of three seasons.

How Much Farther Can This Team Go? THE Question For Girls' Volleyball In 1991

The 1989 Varsity squad racked up a 15-7 record. Four starting Seniors were lost to graduation. And there was the ill-fated experience with a new JV Coach who didn't last a month on the Raider sidelines. Even so, the '90 Varsity Spikers improved over '89 to a 17-6 record and a Star-Ledger ranking of 7th best in New Jersey. Amy Rogers, Tina Massimo, and Courtney Roeser were lost to graduation, three starters equally adept at leadership as well as at volleyball. It did not appear that Maha Shaalan would be returning.

Returning underclassmen and a few new acquisitions, such as the talented Sophomore athlete Kelly McLaughlin, are the key to maintaining the momentum of the past two seasons. Returning Seniors Gevonne Anatol, Nicole Critelli, Christine Chung, and Carolyn Depko must fill the leadership void if the Raiders are to contest for a Conference, County, or State Title in 1991.

Returning spiker and Senior Emily Meyer will need to share both talent and leadership with her younger teammates in 1991.
