Having a sibling in the high school has its pros and cons. There's always a friend to get advice from, except when they're mad at you and the advice is bad. Or you know there's someone you can turn to when in need of that forgotten homework assignment, unless they charge you a fee for the use of it. At least you always have someone to tag along with at school events, unless neither of you enjoys each other's company. Having a sibling to share your school days with can be beneficial, but it also has its added side effects. Despite all the cons, you know that you always have someone to count on.
