

victory spill

Seniors Katie Devlin and Kara Sang pose for a picture upon finishing relay races at the Brunner field day. After a fun-filled afternoon of competitions, Sang finished off her day by spilling water all over herself.

"After Kara spilled water all over herself, we just had to pose for a picture," claimed Devlin.

"You have to do your own growing up no matter how tall your grandfather is."
Abraham Lincoln

seniors Karyn Toffolo, Alexa Knox, Julie Hyman, and Tara Scibek

FOOTPRINTS

The TV show The Wonder Years once noted that "Memories are ways to hold on to people and things you don't want to let go of." Sadly, however, growth was an unstoppable force, and the toddlers of yesterday were today's graduating seniors. Frequently the changes were not as drastic as they may have seemed, as

"Taking the 'now' picture was the first time I've talked to Staci since elementary school."

senior Joe Fallon

we remembered our favorite moments. But for now, pictures spoke louder than words.

2teens

a new beginning

Seniors Danielle Egan and Brittany McDonald strike up a friendship during lunch. "In the beginning of the year, Brittany and I were not close at all, but then we started to participate in after-school activities together," noted Egan.