

in great detail...

In his silver Scion, senior Ricky Lisojo nonchalantly scouts the student lot for a parking spot. Not only did the Scion feature interior and performance modules, but it also displayed the facets of Lisojo's personality. "It shows that I'm very independent and that I work for what I have. It also shows that I'm silver, not gold," commented Lisojo.

"I would define a pimped out car as a car with bling and lots of cool technology, like a navigation system or a DVD player."
senior Julie Hyman

"My car and I are both exciting. It can do a quarter mile in ten minutes and has an awesome system."
senior Jeremy Grau

a classic beauty

While trying to occupy as many spots as she can, senior Becca McGuire enjoys some downtime in her 1981 Volkswagen Rabbit. Even though other students might have treasured their newfangled rides, McGuire's love for her old-school wheels was undying. "I love my car because it's 24 years old, it's retro, and even though the mirror falls off every time I hit a bump, it's still my baby," confessed McGuire.
